EXPLANATORY NOTE

History has shown that the wealth and destinies of the world's greatest nations have been determined and charted by the manner in which they conducted their maritime affairs. Our country is now at the crossroads of development and our maritime sector can rightfully claim that it has made a significant contribution towards achieving this feat. The Philippines is, after all, a maritime country. It is an archipelago of 7,108 islands with a territorial sea that is both a sea chest of vast marine wealth and natural highway for the carriage of trade and commerce.

With the coming into force of the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea in November 16, 1994, the Philippines has thereby gained an Exclusive Economic Zone totaling as much as 652,800 square nautical miles in area, with sovereign rights over the exploration and exploitation of all living and non-living resources found in the water column as well as in the seabed. Our fisheries sector employs around one million Filipinos and contributes much to GNP. Properly explored and exploited, our vast waters and continental shelf promise to provide even greater opportunities for livelihood for our people.

The Filipino people, scattered around these numerous islands, have since time immemorial depended on the sea for transportation. Even in this age of great progress in air and land transportation shipping remains the most economical, most efficient, and most important means of interisland.

Considering the relevance of a Department of Maritime Affairs to the development of the national patrimony and to the achievements of the country's long-term goal of self-reliance and economic self-sufficiency, the sponsor believes that the approval of this bill is of urgent priority.
