HOUSE BILL NO. 690

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article XIII Section 11 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution provides that "the State shall adopt an integrated and comprehensive approach to health development which shall endeavor to make essential goods, health and other social services available to all the people at affordable cost."

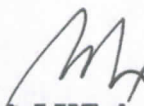

By virtue of the Title I Section 17 of the Local Government Code, deliveries of health care services were devolved to the local government units (LGU), aiming for self-reliant LGUs to deliver more direct and immediate health care services to the people. At the forefront of primary health care delivery are the barangay health workers or BHWs.

At the grassroots where medical practitioners are few and far between, BHWs are tasked with information dissemination on child and maternal health care programs and provision of initial response to health risks. It is thus safe to say that our government's primary responder to any health problem and primary advocate of health prevention is the barangay health worker. They surge into the farthest areas to perform their duties, heedless of the perils along the way. As front liners, BHWs are entrusted with primary health care delivery but the benefits and incentives they receive are not commensurate with the heavy responsibilities they bear.

Republic Act 7883 or the Barangay Health Workers' Benefits and Incentives Act of 1995 allowed for the institutionalization of remuneration for our BHWs but the law has to be updated to present realities. Apart from the hazard and subsistence allowances enshrined in RA 7883, our BHWs nationwide receive somewhere between P100 to P2,000 monthly honorarium depending on the discretion of the local leaders. Although BHWs are categorized as volunteers, such irregular and measly amount does not give them the dignity and recognition they deserved for the valuable work they do. Having to depend on the whims of the local leaders for the amount of their honorarium further demoralize the BHWs as they are often at the mercy of politicians and are often caught in the crossfire of political clashes.

This bill aims to rectify such gaps by providing for fixed monthly honorarium, cash gifts, separation pay and disability benefits to all accredited BHWS. This bill also seeks to ensure that amounts provided in the measure will be adjusted to present realities based on Consumer Price Indices (CPI), upon review and approval of the local health board.

In support of around 220,000 accredited BHWs in the country, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
