HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

House Bill No. 5987

Introduced by MAGDALO Party-List Representative
HON. MANUEL DG. CABOCHAN III

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In 1933, American surveyors discovered and mapped the eastern continental shelf of the Philippines. They discovered an undersea landform which they named Benham Plateau or Benham Rise. Benham Rise's connection to the Philippine shelf through the Palanan saddle and the Bicol saddle was validated only recently to justify the country's territorial claim. This 13 million hectare underwater region, with coordinates 119°30'E to 132°00'E and 12°10'N to 20°30'N, east of Luzon is 35 meters underwater at its shallowest point off the provinces of Aurora and Isabela.

Benham Rise lies within the continental shelf of the Philippines as defined by the 1982 UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (UNCLOS) and is not subject to any maritime boundary disputes and claims. Thus, the Philippines filed a claim to the territory last April 8, 2009, which the UN subsequently approved on April 12, 2012 confirming that the landmass was part of the country's continental shelf. Accordingly, the Congress of the Philippines enacted Republic Act No. 9522, also known as the Archipelagic Baselines Law, which served as the basis of the claim.

Previous studies conducted by the DENR have indicated large deposits of methane in solid form in the area and also manganese nodules. In addition, the NAMRIA also speculates that there are gas deposits in the area. If developed and exploited, Benham Rise could turn the Philippines into a natural gas exporter because of the area's huge methane deposits, thereby reducing the country's dependence on imported petroleum.

Since the decision of the UN was released, it seems that no explorations have been conducted in the area to tap into this potential source of energy. There is a need to look into this and determine what the government, particularly the DENR and the DOE, is doing in order to confirm the reports on the huge gas deposits in the area and how said deposits could be utilized by the country. More alarmingly, Chinese research ships have been spotted increasingly in recent years presumably surveying the area.

In view of the foregoing reasons, the expeditious approval of this bill is earnestly requested.
