EXPLANATORY NOTE

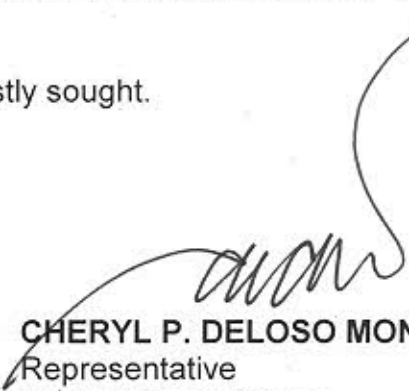

Mount Tapulao which is located in the Municipality of Palauig in the Province of Zambales is the tallest mountain in the Zambales mountain range. Also known as the "High Peak" and "Poor Man's Mt. Pulag," Mount Tapulao is host to a variety of ecosystems ranging from grassland to primary and secondary dipterocarp forests to mossy montane forest and pine forest. In addition to this are the scenic beauties of several waterfalls and a whole lot of endemic plant and animal species that abound this mountain.

With an elevation of 6,683 feet and a rolling and rocky terrain leading to its apex, Mount Tapulao is one of the most attractive places for local and foreign trekkers and mountaineers. At the summit, one can enjoy the view of the Zambales mountain range on the east, the Lingayen Gulf on the north, the Zambales lowlands on the west and the pristine South China Sea on the south.

This rare elegance of Mount Tapulao, however, has been slowly ruined by small scale mining, illegal logging and the careless attitude of local inhabitants and tourists of improperly disposing their garbage anywhere. Several initiatives have been made by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources to protect and preserve the remaining forest cover and the various flora and fauna of Mount Tapulao. But these initiatives are temporary solutions to a gamut of problems that pose a threat to the mountain along with its rare plant and animal species.

This bill which was approved on 3rd Reading by the 16th Congress is being refilled and aims to provide long term protection to the natural beauty of Mount Tapulao while allowing both local and foreign tourists not only to appreciate what Mount Tapulao can offer but also to make them aware of the interrelationships of plant and animal species in the area that collectively makes Mount Tapulao a beauty to behold among the mountain peaks of the world.

Immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
