EXPLANATORY NOTE

Since the establishment of the Philippine General Hospital (PGH) in 1907 by virtue of Act No. 1688 passed by the Philippine Commission, it has served not only as a beacon of hope for Filipinos, particularly the marginalized, seeking professional medical attention but also as a training ground for some of the best and brightest medical students and professionals in the country. In fact, today, PGH is dubbed as the biggest modern government tertiary hospital in the Philippines and the only national referral center for tertiary care.

Since it caters to mostly indigent patients, hundreds of Filipinos flock to the hospital as it offers a wide range of services. As a result, PGH reports that it serves more than 600,000 patients yearly. And with limited bed capacity – 1,100 public beds and 400 private beds – PGH is constantly challenged to provide every patient the needed medical service and care.

As an example, in a 2019 news report, PGH stated that around 250 patients a day visit their emergency room alone which – due to recent renovation efforts – only has 25 beds for patients. Consequently, every day is a constant struggle not only for the patients and their families but also for the health care workers – most of whom have sacrificed better paying positions in private hospitals in order to serve our most vulnerable.

With these in mind, this measure aims to ease to the burden of PGH as it will allow them to expand their facilities in order to cater to more who seek medical attention. As the country's apex hospital dedicated to our poorest of the poor, the government should extend any and all possible support.

Given the abovementioned circumstances, approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
