EXPLANATORY NOTE

The strength, the beauty, the vitality of the Philippines rests in its people, but Filipinos are not a monolithic group: our islands contain a vast diversity of people, different in beliefs and cultures, in talents and capacities, ethnicities and identities. That very diversity is part of our strength, but it can also be a source of misunderstanding and tension. It is a sad fact of human nature that many feel threatened or fearful of those who are not like us, those who are different, and even the most good natured and broad minded will possess biases that can fester if left unexamined. Even worse, there are those unscrupulous groups and individuals who prey on this kind of prejudice and hatred, those who use the tyranny of the majority to exploit and dehumanize vulnerable marginalized groups.

While the government cannot police the hearts and minds of its populace, it can and must educate and regulate, creating an environment conducive to tolerance, unity, and equality. The rights mandated in the Constitution are not solely for the majority to enjoy, but for all Filipinos. To this end, this bill, defines discrimination in a broad, inclusive manner, proscribes discriminatory acts, and mandates the creation of programs and initiatives to foster an environment where discrimination has no place.
