House Bill No. 1855

EXPLANATORY NOTE

In 1994, the Commission on Higher Education was created to take on the responsibility of the then Department of Education, Culture and Sports over higher education and research. Essentially, the Commission was provided overall supervision and regulatory powers over private higher educational institutions and degree programs, and limited influence over state universities and colleges through chairmanship of their governing boards and the recommendation of their budgets to the Department of Budget and Management.

To enhance its developmental role in the higher education subsystem, the Commission was armed with a Higher Education Development Fund which it can use to support, among others, faculty development, the development of centers of excellence in various fields of learning, and enhancing governance over, and linkages between and among, private and public higher educational institutions.

More than a decade after its creation, experiences as well as the enactment of several laws on different professions and professional regulations have necessitated the need to clarify the powers of and strengthen the Commission.

The increase in the number of state universities and colleges (SUCs) as well as the imminent and problematic creation of locally-funded universities and colleges (LUCs), and the concomitant offering by these SUCs and LUCs of numerous degree programs without a CHED evaluation, the rational allocation of state support to these SUCs, the absence of a grievance and conciliation mechanism on academic issues, and the limitation on the number of educational institutions that may be created, are all being addressed in this Bill.

Lastly, this bill seeks to clarify that the Higher Education Development Fund is a trust fund and therefore is free from restriction or limitation on budgetary releases.

In view thereof, immediate approval of this Bill is sought.
