EXPLANATORY NOTE

Excellence in sports, locally or internationally, does not exist in a void.

The case of the Philippine Dragon Boat Federation team that won in the 10th International Dragon Boat Federation World Championships in Tampa Bay, Florida with a sparkling five (5) gold and two (2) silver could not have been, and is most certainly not a Pyrrhic victory.

The team, rightly or wrongly, on account of badly construed, nay wrongly applied accreditation criteria by the very sports commission that should have simply operationalized its vision to increase participation in sports by Filipinos actually – received nothing in government subsidy or any loos change.

And yet, Philippine Dragon Boat Federation won thereby showcasing the world class talents of Filipinos and making every Filipino, not the least, the Office of the President, extremely proud of every member of that team.

The team, consisting of men from the Philippine Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Air Force at that , is not one drop of doubt, Philippine-representative not just in the military front but more so in the sporting world.

Whether the Philippine Sports Commission or that of the Philippine Olympic Committee recognizes the team as national athletes or not ceases to be of any moment to the fact that Philippine Dragon has just validated its status as a global power in the sport.

Matters worse, the indicative if not deliberate nonchalance of PSC, reason for zero government subsidy in a competing Philippine team, speaks volumes of 'agency dysfunction.'

It is the humble submission of this author that accreditation shall be loosely regulated toward a liberal grant of subsidy or support from government for every athlete or team competing in world sports event.

The immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
