EXPLANATORY NOTE

Republic Act No. 5487, otherwise known as the Private Security Industry Act was enacted into law on June 21, 1969 and subsequently amended by Presidential Decree No. 11 in October 3, 1972. There have been immense developments in, and expansion of the private security industry after more than forty years since the law was first passed, but the law remains the same.

This bill seeks to professionalize the industry by intensifying the requirements for training and professional certification of security practitioners. More importantly, it is determined to uplift the plight and status of security guards who are the cornerstones of the private security industry. Amendments introduced to Republic Act No. 5487 are intended to address the needs and concerns of security guards, with the goal of improving their well-being, status in life and providing them with a deeper sense of pride in serving and protecting their fellow Filipinos.

The bill also intends to increase the efficiency of the security industry by introducing amendments to lessen bureaucracy with respect to licensing, operation and regulation of private security agencies. It also gives the agency players a greater role in the drafting of regulations and issuances related to and affecting private security agencies and private security personnel.

Another important amendment to R.A. No. 5487 that is introduced in this Bill is the provision on safeguards for the public against private security agencies that act as private armies. These safeguards become relevant with the advent of alleged human rights violations and election-related violence that have both been associated with the existence of private armies.

Amendments to the Private Security Agency Act are necessary in order to make the law more responsive to the changing times and changing needs not only of the private security industry but also the society.

Approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
