HOUSE BILL NO. _____

Introduced by REP. ROMAN T. ROMULO

AN ACT
PROVIDING FOR PARENT SUPPORT, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

".... they who protected the weakness of our infancy, are entitled to our protection in the infirmity of their age; they who by sustenance and education have enabled their offspring to prosper, ought in return to be supported by that offspring, in case they stand in need of assistance."¹

Filial responsibility statutes or the rules mandating children to provide support to their parents existed for over thousands of years. As early as the third century A.D. in Roman society, there were statutory mutual obligations of support and maintenance between children and parents. Ethics also dictated support of relatives in medieval Europe. This ethical standard developed by custom and usage into support laws from parent to child and, ultimately, from child to parent. Later, a law imposing the duty of parental support on children was incorporated in the Code Napoleon, the civil code enacted in the 1800s, which became the main influence of 19th-century civil codes of most countries of continental Europe and Latin America. In 1601, a relative responsibility statute enacted by English Parliament in 1597, which applied only to parents and children, was extended to additional collateral relatives.²

In the United States, 30 states have filial responsibility laws: Alaska, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Idaho, Iowa, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Montana, Nevada,

² A comparative analysis of Filial Responsibility: Italy and United States by Anna Maria De Giacomo

States with filial responsibility statutes take a variety of approaches to implementation. There are those who allow some sort of civil court action to obtain financial support (or cost recovery), others specify a criminal penalty for filial non-support, while some states allow both civil and criminal actions.

We, Filipinos, are well-known for our close family ties. Because of this, it is not surprising that we have the usual inclination to care for our elderly. However, even with this close family ties, there are cases of elderly, sick, and incapacitated parents who were abandoned by their own children. Nowadays, the sights of abandoned elderly in our streets become typical. Children fail to provide the necessary support to their aging, sick and incapacitated parents. This happens despite our moral and natural obligation to maintain our parents who are in need of support. On the same vein, our Family Code imposes on us the legal obligation to support our elderly. Article 195 of our Family Code provides:

Article 195. Subject to the provisions of the succeeding articles, the following are obliged to support each other to the whole extent set forth in the preceding article:

- (1) The spouses;
- (2) Legitimate ascendants and descendants;
- (3) Parents and their legitimate children and the legitimate and illegitimate children of the latter;
- (4) Parents and their illegitimate children and the legitimate and illegitimate children of the latter; and
- (5) Legitimate brothers and sisters, whether of full or half-blood.

However, despite said provision of the Family Code, many elderly who no longer have any means of supporting themselves are being neglected and abandoned by their children. While government is doing its best in providing support in the form of food and shelter as well as enacting legislations like the Senior Citizens Act, it cannot be over-emphasized that taking care of the elderly members of the society is not only the function of government, but rather it is a shared responsibility of government and the children of said elderly. The care for the aged is neither an exclusively private matter to be left to the family nor an exclusively public concern best left to the government.

This proposed bill therefore seeks to further strengthen filial responsibility and to make it a criminal offense in case of flagrant violation thereof. Abandonment of a parent in need of support shall likewise constitute a criminal act. A parent who is in need of support may file a petition for support before the court and pray for the issuance of a support order against those children who failed or refused to provide the necessary support. The legal representation of the parent in need of support will be provided by the Public Attorney's Office and no court fees will be assessed. This bill also seeks to establish Old Age Home for the elderly, sick or otherwise incapacitated parents in every province and highly urbanized cities.

In light of the foregoing, the passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
