EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 2652

INTRODUCED BY REP. JB BERNOS

EXPLANATORY NOTE

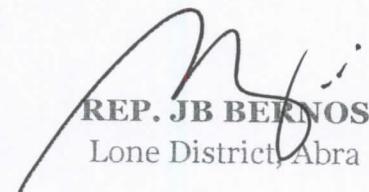

What is known today as the Abra State Institute of Sciences and Technology (ASIST) in the Province of Abra came from an earlier incarnation of the school called Lagangilang Agriculture College through Batas Pambansa Blg. 392 enacted on 18 May 1983. The said law established ASIST with a purpose, as mentioned in Section 2 of the said law, to provide "technological, professional, technical, and vocational education and shall inspire leadership in the field of agriculture, forestry, home technology, agricultural education, and industry, through scientific research and extension".

Currently, ASIST, which caters to an average of 4,000 students every Academic Year, has a main campus in the Municipality of Lagangilang and another campus in the Municipality of Bangued, the Province's capital town. It offers undergraduate programs in teacher education, agricultural technology, agribusiness, engineering, industrial technology, and forestry, as well as graduate programs in education, non-degree programs, and basic education program. Among the degree programs ASIST offers, Secondary Education, Elementary Education, and Agriculture have the highest numbers of enrollees and received Level II accreditation in the entire SUC. These programs are also well in their way to attain Level III status.

ASIST is strongly committed to research and extension services. It conducted the First Abrenian Inter-Agency RDE Conference last August 2016, participated by other higher education institutions (HEIs) and national government agencies that showcased research papers on agriculture, home technology, and cultural studies. Apart from their strong commitment to research and development of the local industries, ASIST is also heavily involved in strengthening the capacities of its libraries, pushing for the modernization of its facilities with emphasis on integration of information technology. ASIST is also engaged in community extension services, conducting trainings in barangays and serving more than 2,000 beneficiaries in the past year. With all of the achievements of this state college: it will not be a surprise if it will be a candidate for the ISO certification, which they are currently working on to obtain.

By transforming ASIST into a University, it will be given sufficient resources and ample opportunities to strengthen its degree programs to meet the demands of the communities, the Province, and of the entire Cordillera Administrative Region, especially on teacher education, agriculture, industrial technology, and information technology. Through this conversion, the ASIST will be able to facilitate modernization of its facilities pursuant to its mission to primarily provide technological, professional, and technical education, and shall inspire leadership in the field of agricultural education and industry through scientific research and extension. In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this Bill is earnestly sought.
