First Regular Session

House Bill No. 2174

Introduced by Rep. BERNADETTE "BH" HERRERA-DY

AN ACT PROMOTING POSITIVE AND NON-VIOLENT DISCIPLINE OF CHILDREN AND APPROPRIATING FUNDS THEREFOR

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child defines "corporal" or "physical" punishment as any punishment in which physical force is used and intended to cause some degree of pain or discomfort, however light.<sup>1</sup> The UN Committee also considers as corporal punishment other non-physical but equally cruel degrading forms of punishment, which includes "punishment which belittles, humiliates, denigrates, scapegoats, threatens, scares or ridicules the child."

Corporal punishment is very common in the Philippines. The most abusive acts were those inflicted by parents in the name of discipline. Studies and surveys show that parents in the Philippines discipline and punish their children through the use of corporal or physical punishment such as spanking with hand, pinching, hitting with an object, twisting the child's ear, pulling the hair, slapping the face or head, confinement in a sack, or shaking.<sup>2</sup> Filipino children also experience threats of physical punishment and humiliating treatments such as being shouted at in front of others, labeling and denigration.<sup>3</sup> 85% of children surveyed said that they were punished in the home, and 82% said that they were hit in different parts of the body.<sup>4</sup>

Corporal punishment is ineffective in disciplining children of all ages. Most often, it produces anger, resentment, and low-self-esteem among children.<sup>5</sup> It also teaches the child that violence is an acceptable behavior and is a solution to problems; thus, corporal punishment perpetuates itself as children imitate the actions of adults.<sup>6</sup> In fact, parents admit that they feel guilty and sorry about punishing their children but they are not aware of any other way of disciplining children except for what they have learned from their own parents and grandparents. Parents have expressed the need for alternative positive and non-violent methods for disciplining children.<sup>7</sup>

The proposed Positive and Non Violent Discipline of Children bill aims to prohibit corporal punishment and all other form so humiliating or degrading punishment of children in all settings and promote positive and non-violent discipline of children. It borrows from and builds upon H.B. 8239 (17th Congress), which the House of Representatives approved on Third and final reading, and in effect reintroduces the measure.

The bill seeks to strengthen the country's laws, policies and programs in respecting child's rights, human dignity, physical integrity and equal protection of law in compliance with the Philippine government's obligation to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child. The bill specifically outlines all prohibited forms of physical and degrading or humiliating punishment of children at home, in schools, in institutions, in alternative care systems and in all other settings. The proposed prohibited acts are: forcing the minor to kneel on stones, salt or pebbles; squatting; public humiliation; deliberate neglect of child's physical needs; exposure to substances that can cause discomfort; and imposing tasks that the minor is incapable of doing such as forcing to skip sleep and verbal assaults.

In view of the foregoing, the urgent approval of this bill is earnestly sought.

4         SECTION 1. Short Title. – This Act shall be known as the “Positive and Nonviolent 5         Discipline of Children Act”.

6         SECTION 2. Declaration of Policy. – The State recognizes that the family, being 7         the foundation of the nation, is a basic social institution which public policy cherishes and 8         protects, and that parents are primarily responsible in the rearing and nurturing of their 9         children. To this end, the State shall, pursuant to its constitutional mandate, protect and 10         strengthen the family as a basic, autonomous social institution, and support the natural, 11         primary right and duty of parents in the rearing of youth for the development of their moral 12         character and civic efficiency. As such, the State shall respect the rights of parents to rear 13         their children in whatever manner they deem appropriate for as long as it does not violate 14         the rights of the children.

15         The State likewise recognizes the vital role of the child and the youth in nation building
16         and shall promote and protect their physical, moral, spiritual, intellectual, and social well-17         being. Pursuant thereto, a child has the right to be protected from all forms of physical or 18         mental violence, injury or abuse, neglect or negligent treatment, and maltreatment or 19         exploitation, as a form of discipline while in the care of parents, legal guardians or any other 20         person who has the care of the child. Such treatment or punishment violates the child's 21         rights, human dignity and physical integrity.

22         As such, the State shall:

23             (a) Recognize and uphold the right of the child as human being, individual, and 24         member of a family and community, to equal protection of the law;

25             (b) Promote positive and nonviolent discipline of children at home, in school, in 26         institutions, in alternative care systems, in workplaces and in all other settings by 27         encouraging behavior change in adults and establish the necessary structures and 28         mechanisms and mobilize resources to make this possible;

1       (c) Defend the right of the child to assistance, including proper care and nutrition, and 2 special protection from all forms of neglect, abuse, cruelty, exploitation and other conditions
3 prejudicial to their development;

4       (d) Protect the best interests of the child through measures that will ensure the 5 observance of international standards of child protection, especially those expressed in 6 international conventions and treaties to which the Philippines is a party to, particularly the 7 United Nations Convention on the Rights of a Child (UNCRC);

8       (e) Respect the responsibilities, rights and duties of parents, guardians or other 9 persons legally responsible for the child, including those exercising special or substitute
10 parental authority as those provided for under Presidential Decree No. 603, otherwise known
11 as the "Child and Youth Welfare Code", as amended; Executive Order No. 209, otherwise 12 known as the "Family Code of the Philippines", as amended; and Republic Act No. 7610, as 13 amended, otherwise known as the "Special Protection of Children Against Child Abuse, 14 Exploitation and Discrimination Act"; to provide, in a manner consistent with the evolving 15 capacities of the child, appropriate direction and guidance in the exercise of the child's 16 rights;

17       (f) Provide an enabling environment for parents to empower themselves and fulfill 18 their parental obligations to discipline their child through positive and nonviolent means;

19       (g) Ensure that school discipline is administered in a manner that respects the child's 20 human dignity;

21       (h) Promote the principles of restorative justice in cases involving parents, guardians 22 or other adults caring for the child; and

23       (i) Protect the child from all forms of physical or mental violence, injury from abuse, 24 neglect or negligent treatment, maltreatment or exploitation, while in the custody of parents, 25 guardians, or any other person under whose care the child is entrusted. Such protective 26 measures shall include effective procedures for the establishment of social programs to 27 provide necessary support for the child and for those who care for the child, other forms of 28 prevention, identification, reporting, referral, investigation, treatment and follow-up of 29 instances of child maltreatment, and, as appropriate, for legal or judicial action.

30       This law is not meant to interfere with the primary responsibility of parents or persons 31 legally responsible for the child in the home setting to rear and discipline their child as 32 enshrined in the Constitution. Neither is it the intention to give the state control over the 33 parenting or disciplinary method of a parent.

36 building the child's competence and confidence, assisting the child in understanding and
