AN ACT
PROVIDING DIRECT FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO FILIPINO RICE FARMERS, ESTABLISHING FOR THE PURPOSE THE PANTAWID MAGSASAKANG PILIPINO
PROGRAM, PROVIDING FUNDS THEREFOR, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The rescission of quantitative import restrictions on rice serves two fundamental purposes. First, it intends to reduce the prices of rice in the market and to make the food staple more accessible to the poor and low-income families. Second, it seeks to protect the interests of rice farmers by providing a means to raise the farmers' income and consequently, their competitiveness relative to rice farmers in other rice-producing countries. As Dr. Emil Q. Javier noted<sup>1</sup>, attaining the first purpose is relatively straightforward but achieving the second is challenging and problematic.

The challenges and issues in improving agricultural incomes and competitiveness, while having been in existence prior to the effectivity of Republic Act No. 11203, nonetheless remain largely unaddressed. Provision of farm machineries would not immediately aid in reducing labor cost, improving yield volume and quality, nor optimizing farm operations, as the promise of efficiency might not offset the cost of owning, operating and maintaining farm machineries for small and at times economically nonviable farms and landholdings. Developing, propagating and promoting inbred palay seeds would not instantly lead to improvement in rice production volume because the system that will provide inbred seeds to rice farmers remains largely inadequate and extensively vulnerable to corruption.

Extension of an additional credit line would not necessarily increase farmers' preference towards government credit over informal loans, because the issues regarding the tedious documentary and other requirements imposed upon farmer-llees and the chronic problems concerning the economic equity, efficiency and viability of agricultural lands remain unresolved. Agricultural extension services can only be effective if such programs are appropriately combined with other government interventions such as extensive research, intensive market development, and accessible credit supply – most of which are, at present, insufficiently extended to rice farmers. Most importantly, these interventions would do little to address the single, most devastating impact of the rescission of quantitative rice import restrictions have on rice farmers: the drastic decline in farmers' income from rice production.

Hence, this bill seeks to provide direct financial assistance to rice farming households by instituting a Pantawid Magsasakang Pilipino Program. In this proposed measure, the allocation of tariff revenues collected in excess of P10 billion shall be provided to farmers in the form of a conditional cash transfer program. Moreover, it mandates the provision of rice insurance to protect rice crops against insurable risks. Lastly, it provides farmers with additional income through temporary employment in government projects.

These interventions are sought in cognizance of the short-term obligation to mitigate the abrupt reduction of farmer incomes caused by the rescission of quantitative rice import restrictions and the medium- to long-term need to keep farmers producing food staples, in line with the twin objectives of improving overall agricultural productivity and achieving food security.

In view of the foregoing, the swift passage of the proposed measure is earnestly sought.
