AN ACT

INCREASING THE EXCISE TAX ON MINERALS, MINERAL PRODUCTS AND QUARRY RESOURCES, AMENDING FOR THE PURPOSE CERTAIN SECTIONS OF THE NATIONAL INTERNAL REVENUE CODE OF 1997, AS AMENDED

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The national government is perpetually searching for sources of revenues to finance its operations. Over the years, the tax rates on some excisable products have remained unchanged. Hence, increments in tax collections from these products come from increases in the volume of removals or the products' prices.

Historically, the excise tax on nonmetallic minerals and quarry resources is imposed based on the actual value of the gross output at the rate of one and a half percent (1.5%) from 1939 to 1977. Then it was increased to three percent (3%) until 1994. The rate was reduced in 1994 to two percent (2%) of the actual market value or the value used by the Bureau of Customs (BOC) in determining the tariff and customs duties in the case of importation. With the enactment of Republic Act (RA) No. 10963 in 2017, the rate was again increased to four percent (4%) based on the actual market value of the gross output or the value used by the BOC in determining tariff and customs duties.

The rate on metallic minerals was initially set at one and a half percent (1.5%) of actual market value of the annual gross output, and then increased to five percent (5%) in 1977. With the passage of Republic Act No. 7729 in 1994, the rates were trimmed down: for copper and other metallic minerals, to one percent (1%) until 1997 and increased to its present rate at two percent (2%); and for gold and chromite, two percent (2%) of actual market value of the annual gross output. Under the National Internal Revenue Code (NIRC), as amended, the rates were uniform at two percent (2%) of actual market value of the annual gross output. In 2017, the rates were increased to four percent (4%) for copper and other metallic minerals and gold and chromite.

Based on available data, the excise tax collections from minerals and quarry resources were P25.691 billion in 2017, P35.494 billion in 2016 and P32.751 billion in 2014.

This bill proposes to increase the tax on minerals and quarry resources from four percent (4%) to seven percent (7%). Although the ad valorem rate guarantees increased tax revenues during periods of high commodity prices, these increments are volatile. With the passage of this bill, the national government can look forward to higher revenues than it has collected in recent years.

The potential revenue from the proposed increase in excise tax on mineral products shall be equally divided between the national government and the local government units (LGUs) where the mineral and quarry resources are extracted. In particular, revenues from the three and a half percent (3.5%) tax on minerals shall accrue to the National Treasury, while revenues from the other three and a half percent (3.5%) tax on minerals shall be remitted directly to the LGUs as support for the Special Education Fund (SEF) of the LGUs. With the infusion of additional funds, it is hoped that the perennial shortages of classrooms, tables and chairs, books, teaching aids and other educational materials will be addressed.

The proposed increase in the excise tax on mineral and quarrying activities would not even be commensurate to the natural hazards brought about by mining and quarrying activities to our environment particularly in areas that are rich in biodiversity, in geohazard zones or within the ancestral domain of indigenous peoples. Mineral wastes cause sulfurous dust clouds that result in acid rain. Abandoned strip mines are often used as unregulated landfills for hazardous wastes. Mine tailings and their associated metal contaminants, such as arsenic, cadmium, lead, mercury, sodium cyanide, and zinc can contaminate nearby water sources rendering them useless as sources of food, water, and livelihood. Mining in upland areas further reduce forest cover and leave a toxic heritage for succeeding generations.<sup>2</sup>

It is hoped that the increase in tax on mineral products will become synonymous to a revitalized and strengthened responsible mining and environmental protection.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this bill is earnestly requested.
